

Also, look for features on two great pals of TVG; Helen Jones, the lady behind the wonders of vintage fairs at Gloucester and Stroud, and Rose Devine (pictured right) smooth soulful vintage singer coming up through the ranks fast! So keep a careful eye on both these talented girls over the next year as I do believe, they will both take the vintage scene by storm!

The future is looking rosie for Rose Devine...

Rose Devine is a lady with enormous potential, as well as a glowing diary. Perfecting every note, she brings the air of this nostalgic event light as well as depth. A fair is just a fair without the soul of an entertainer or a songstress. 'I love coming here,' says Rose. 'I love the feel of the place.'

It's one of those places which brings a smile to your face. I have met the best people doing this. There are such incredible people in this vintage world. So much warmth and friendliness.' Rose is very much a performer who's visual appearance is equally important as the sound. 'I love buying clothes to perform in!' She giggles.

'I will mix stuff, skirts and tops as well as dresses and keep an eye on colour. I remark on her beautiful black patent heels with daisy detail. 'The truth is, this whole outfit was based around these shoes. What I love doing is having a root round a charity shop and finding a vintage gem!!'

I ask her what it's like singing in front of a crowd of market dwellers. 'It's fine!' she smiles, brushing down her skirt. 'Singing here, I get to look up and the trees and the sky and I can dream and go off into my own world.'

There is certainly a lot more to this lady than just standing up and belting out a few tunes. Watching Rose perform is quite captivating.

She has quite a magnetic air about her that you have to watch. She is expressive in each song, giving every tune a heartfelt performance, ideal for any occasion, and it no wonder she is a hit at weddings and parties.

I love to see people going about their day, walking past, chatting and enjoying themselves. It makes me feel happy that they are having a good time also '
